1. The defense of Split includes a radar station located on Mount Marian at geodetic point 183 m. A hut situated on the peak of Mount Marian serves both as a guardhouse and a naval observation post. Two coastal batteries in a cave at Cape Giovo, on Giovo island, form part of the Split coastal defense which stretches from Marian to the port of Sv. Stefan. Pits have been dug in the rock at Cape Sv. Stefan for the installation of several medium caliber and heavy caliber guns.
2. Divulje is the natural air base being developed twenty kilometers from Split in the direction of the Kastels. The field has four hangars, two large barracks, and about ten planes. Daily flights are made from Divulje to the island of Vis.
 - a. E on the attached sketch denotes a factory for liquid oxygen, of great industrial importance in the line of military production. The output of the factory approximates one carload of oxygen tubes per day.
 - b. D on the sketch denotes a natural rock cave equipped to accommodate nine Yugoslav Navy MAS vessels.
3. The Vis airfield is very well equipped with reflectors, signal equipment, and devices for night landing. Eight planes can take off from the field simultaneously. On the coast to the northeast, seaplane hangars have been built in the rock. Two or three such caves contain three pursuit planes each. The caves can also accommodate submarines and have all been fortified with cement. Similar pens are to be found on the island of Bisevo.
